

01. Model the library program where the library contains collection of book objects. demonstrate of composition. creating where the library has book objects.

02. Model a basic banking system where are different type of accounts (savings and Checking) are represented use encapsulation for managing account details compositions for associating customers with account inherit and polymorphism. For account types and abstractions for abstract account classes.

03. Model a university system where there are different types of courses (undergraduate, Postgraduate). use encapsulation for course details compositions to associate student with courses inheritance and polymorphism to represent course types.

04. Model a vehicle rental system via different type of vehicles (cars and bicycles) have different rental rates use encapsulation for vehicle details, composition to associate a rental with a customer an inheritance and polymorphism for different types of vehicles.

05. Write a java program to model hotel reservation system. there are different types of rooms available for booking and the system has customers, who can make reservations. the hostel includes different types of rooms such as StandardRoom, DeluxeRoom or Suite. with different amenities and facilities.